Wagner has worked aimlessly in and around the music business for a good few years in garage bands, covers bands and now as a solo singer-songwriter. This four-track release is his debut, and you wonder why such a talented guy should wait so long before finally releasing a record. A literate writer with a smooth, caring voice, he connects emotionally from the very first notes of the opening Traveling in an Old Car, a reflective song that should reverberate with all those who hear it. He makes universal connections with thoughtful lyrics blended with memorable melodies that revolve around the head hours after the CD has finished playing. These four impressive songs have a total playing time of twenty minutes—and that's much too short. I look forward with great anticipation to a full-length album.
